1. Theoretical Framework

1.1 Rationale:

ESSEMM Corp is a partnership business who manufacture and supply kitchen appliances based in Coimbatore, Tamil Nadu, India. Having been setup for almost 20 years, they have a heritage of quality and precision in engineering innovative models of kitchen machines and appliances.

Therefore, I understood that the problem directly affects their mission statement of providing first-class quality products to their customers efficiently. Thus, I will be examining different marketing strategies to rectify their issue. The methods, tools and theories I will be using are: Boston matrix to review the firm’s product portfolio, Ansoff matrix to help in the probable incorporation of different expansion strategies and Sales Forecasting to predict upcoming sales figures.

Executive Summary (Abstract)

ESSEMM is a partnership business involved in the production and supply of kitchen appliances. Based in Coimbatore, Tamil Nadu, the company has been operating since 1998. Currently, ESSEMM is facing a decrease in their sales revenue as a result their profit margin has reduced. This may be due to the inefficiency of marketing practices. Thus, this investigation aims to answer the question, “How can ESSEMM improve their marketing strategies to fulfil customer satisfaction?”.¹

For my research, primary information was acquired from interviews and a survey with important stakeholders i.e. Vice President, Marketing Manager and some customers. Secondary information included sales figures, profit margin, costs, market share and the company website.

Methods of analysis were possible from the use of Boston Matrix, Ansoff Matrix, Marketing Mix and Sales Forecasting. This helped to construct the company’s current position, employed marketing strategies and objectives with respect to the issues they are facing based on qualitative and quantitative data. However, limitations are also present due to the low number of customers responding to the survey. Moreover, it is recommended that ESSEMM improve their marketing strategies by developing a mobile application to fulfil customer satisfaction.

Introduction

ESSEMM Partnership Corporation is a kitchen appliances company based in Coimbatore, Tamil Nadu, India. The company was founded in 1998, and has been providing quality and innovative models of kitchen machines and appliances to restaurants, hotels, hostels, hospitals and canteens, namely customers who need to produce food in bulk. They mostly only sell to other businesses by exporting and supplying within India and internationally to some other countries as well. Their very own manufactured products are available under the brand name of Cosmos. They also have loyal customers who are easily retained for every purchase.²

As ESSEMM innovates and supplies many new products each year, they are faced with the difficulty of distribution channel problems. On some orders, they are unable to efficiently deliver to their customers due to transportation issues such as wastage of time due to and product damages as a result of long routes and less trucks. Adding on, they have no intermediaries in their distribution channel and prefer to directly deliver to their customers to establish a personal bond and comfort leading to a good brand image and customer satisfaction. However, this leads to the company spending more on shipment and transit costs. As a result, ESSEMM are not able to push and market their products to a wider customer base³. Therefore, this research will revolve around the question - “How can ESSEMM improve their marketing strategies to fulfil customer satisfaction?”

Procedure and Methodology

Primary Research: The procedure of acquiring primary information required interviews with concerned individuals to gain different perspectives on the issue and the overall image of where the company stands. Firstly, I had interviewed the Vice President of the company to understand what the business is as a whole and its important aspects. Then, I had interviewed the Marketing Manager to get more insight on the currently faced issue and the marketing strategies used by the company to rectify it. I had also issued a small questionnaire to 8 customers to gain information of their level of satisfaction first-hand.

Secondary Research: Collection of data such as sale, profit and cost figures from 3 years, market share graphs and their product line on their website to determine which products sell the most and how profitable and competitive the company is. This also helped me to assess the impact of the issue on overall sales and brand image.

Summary of Primary and Secondary Research

After the interviews, I was made fully aware of the organization, their goals, objectives, mission and vision statements, marketing practices, products and the main issue. ESSEMM is currently looking at making and marketing new kitchen products every year. They plan on expanding and setting up operations in new cities such as Bangalore, Chennai and Mumbai as there will be easier access to customers. I also understood their marketing mix and how they strategize each P of the mix.¹³

From the data above it can be inferred that ESSEMM has had steady revenue growth till 2018. Profit figures have also peaked at this time. However, in 2019 the revenue figures have dropped by more than 1 crore and the profit has significantly dropped by 85 lakhs. Though they are a market leader; however, they are closely tied by ABC Argo and Food Machines. From the survey conducted, customer seem very happy with the company as most of them are retained for purchase, are satisfied by the product and services and have a good sense of trust due to the quality of the products which ensures a good brand image too.

Analysis and Discussion

Boston Matrix:

Is a marketing tool used to examine an organisation's product portfolio/product range (Hoang 131). It shows ESSEMM's main products with respect to high and low market share and market growth. This can help managers to promote, change price or discontinue the products.

Fig 12: BCG Matrix¹⁴

Stars: Are products with high or an increasing market share in a high growth market so are in the growing stage. With increased marketing and promotional activities, these products can be made into market leaders or cash cows. Includes some of ESSEMM's newly launched products already seeing high growth and success.

Question Marks: Are products that have low market share in a high growth market. With more investment these products can become stars. These products have the potential for huge growth if marketed to the right target market. Products like BBQ Machines are only now being popularized in the Indian Market.

¹⁴ Appendix 2: Interview with Marketing Manager, Appendix 3: Customer Survey Q3

Cash Cows: Are products with high market share in a low growth market. Though they are the main generators of cash, they are in the maturity stage where extension strategies have to be implemented in order to prevent saturation and decline turning them into dogs. ESSEMM uses personalized customization and after sales service or extended warranties as extension methods.

Dogs: Are products at the end of their product life cycle, so operate in low growth market with low market share. They drain money from the business; hence these products need to be discontinued. The low level of demand for these products prevents sales as here the companies ESSEMM supplies to no longer want these products as better alternatives are made.

Furthermore, having a product portfolio and analysing them with the matrix will help ESSEMM to know exactly which products to push and which ones need to be discontinued, in order to meet customer demands and remain profitable.

Ansoff Matrix:

Is a management growth tool used by businesses to identify and decide their product and market growth strategies in terms of the risk involved (Hoang 16).

Fig 13: Ansoff Matrix

Market Development: growth strategy where a business sells its existing products into new markets. ESSEMM is planning to sell their products across India for people to be familiarized with the brand. The primarily resides in metropolitan cities such as Bangalore (where they have already set up shop and supplying), Hyderabad, Chennai, Mumbai and Cochin, as these cities have a large population being home to many eateries and restaurants. This gives access to a wider customer base for the company. It can the boost brand image and potentially give ESSEMM a higher market share in the Indian market. However, there is also risk involved such that ESSEMM may face heavy competition and the customer tastes may vary, so some products cannot be sold. This may result in higher market research costs for the company. They may also need to invest in new and efficient distribution channels, which is the main issue faced.¹⁵

Product Development: the growth strategy where a business introduces new products into existing markets. ESSEMM innovates new products every year adhering to its customers' needs. The Cook-wok and Vegetable Cutter which were newly launched in the beginning of 2019, have already been a success among the existing customer base as they are considered to be Cash Cows, bringing the greatest revenue for the company. Compared to market development, product development has been more successful as the existing customer base is accustomed to the brand hence loyalty is present. ESSEMM also modifies their products to best fit customer requirements as an extension strategy, as they are operating in a niche market. They are also able to cover their research and development costs through retained sales which is the only drawback of this strategy.¹⁶

The Marketing Mix:

Is a combination of strategies that can be controlled by a company to influence customers to purchase its products.

Fig 14: Marketing Mix¹⁷

Price	Is the way in which a business prices its products (Hoang 135), ESSEMM mainly uses cost-plus or mark-up pricing which adds profit above the cost of production to cover costs and incur a high profit margin in the process. Though this method has proved successful for ESSEMM, competitors selling lower quality products, undercut ESSEMM's prices which drives off potential new buyers.

¹⁵ Appendix 2: Interview with Marketing Manager

¹⁶ Appendix 2: Interview with Marketing Manager

¹⁷ Appendix 2: Interview with Marketing Manager

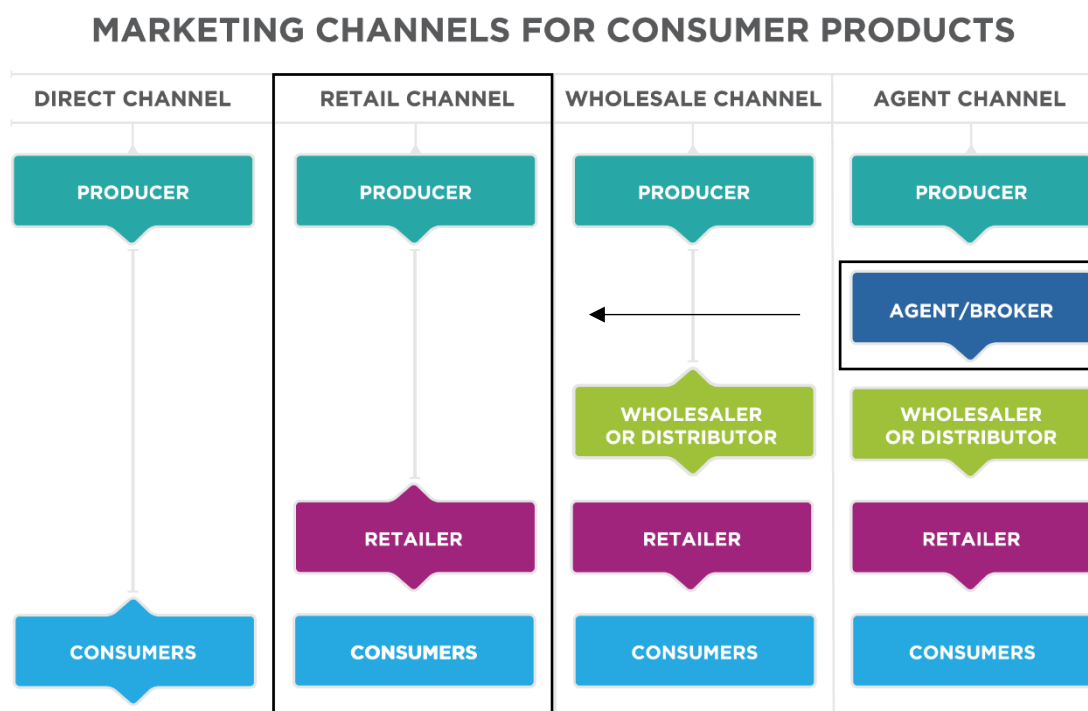

Product	Refers to the product itself and its life cycle (Hoang 130). ESSEMM uses many extension strategies in order to keep most of their products in the maturity stage. They offer extended warranties in the case of defects and modify the kitchen appliances to their customers' needs. As seen customers are very happy with the after sales service and is what ESSEMM gives most importance to. Their products are classified both SS304 and SS316 which is the highest standard for stainless-steel. The products are packaged in wooden crates to be environmentally cautious, however there are concerns with transportation damages.
Place	Is about distributing the right product to the right customers at the right time and place (Hoang 143). Currently ESSEMM is using a zero-channel network or a direct channel where there are no intermediaries and the products are sold directly to the customer. Although this has ensured a good employee-customer relationship, ESSEMM is facing difficulties in distributing their products to their existing customer base. They can use a retail channel where the retailer buys the products from ESSEMM and also promote their products at the same time. This can help expand their customer base by using Superstore retailers in other cities developing their market. In case of international exports ESSEMM can use an agent, in-between who can aid with legal policies of tariffs, embargos and quotas. Their products cannot be sold to wholesalers as ESSEMM uses job production on each of its products. However, using a retailer can increase the price as their costs are added on to the final point of sale.
Promotion	is the process of raising customer awareness and interest in a product or brand in order to generate sales (Hoang 138). ESSEMM uses above-the-line (promotion via independent media or a third-party organization) and below-the-line (direct) promotion in unison. This leads to their promotional mix. Above-the-line: Currently ESSEMM uses television advertising, the newspaper and other listing websites such as India Mart and Trade India as a medium to reach customers. It is effective in reaching the local customers in the geographical region. The advert is displayed in a popular channel, thereby reaching customers who speak the same language. However, competitors are also present who advertise in the newspaper and the website. Viewers have the tendency to ignore adverts on television due to the cluster.

Below-the-line: ESSEMM mainly uses point of sale, emails and exhibitions. The main aim is for the customer to see the functionality of the appliances first hand through a visual representation and also being able to answer questions that customers may have. Compared to above-the-line, this method is more cost effective and can retain customers. However, the emails may be categorized as spam and customers may never see them and limited opportunities to exhibit at trade shows which only take place a few times throughout the year.

Therefore, ESSEMM has an effective promotional mix which informs the customers about the products and persuades them to buy the product over rival brands. Since ESSEMM has plans for expansion into the whole Indian market and foreign markets as well, using more below the line promotion would be more effective and can also have a unique selling proposition from the cluster.

Sales Forecasting:

Is a strategic quantitative planning tool that helps a business see the predicted level of sales that a firm expects to earn over a certain period of time (Hoang 119). In this case, ESSEMM can predict sales in the upcoming years in order to manage their flow of cash and other operations.¹⁸

Calculating Average Sales Revenue: $\frac{\text{Sum of Total Sales Revenue}}{\text{Time Period}}$

Sum of Total Sales revenue =

$$18,52,69,380.32 + 21,81,38,097.62 + 23,47,32,314.17 + 22,46,60,122.00 \\ = ₹ 86,27,99,914.11$$

Time Period = 4 years

$$\text{Average} = \frac{86,27,99,914.11}{4} = ₹ 21,56,99,978.53$$

Hence ESSEMM is making an average sales revenue of ₹ 21,56,99,978.53 per year.

Calculating Moving Average:

Is used to discover underlying trends from a data set by levelling out variations and deviations.

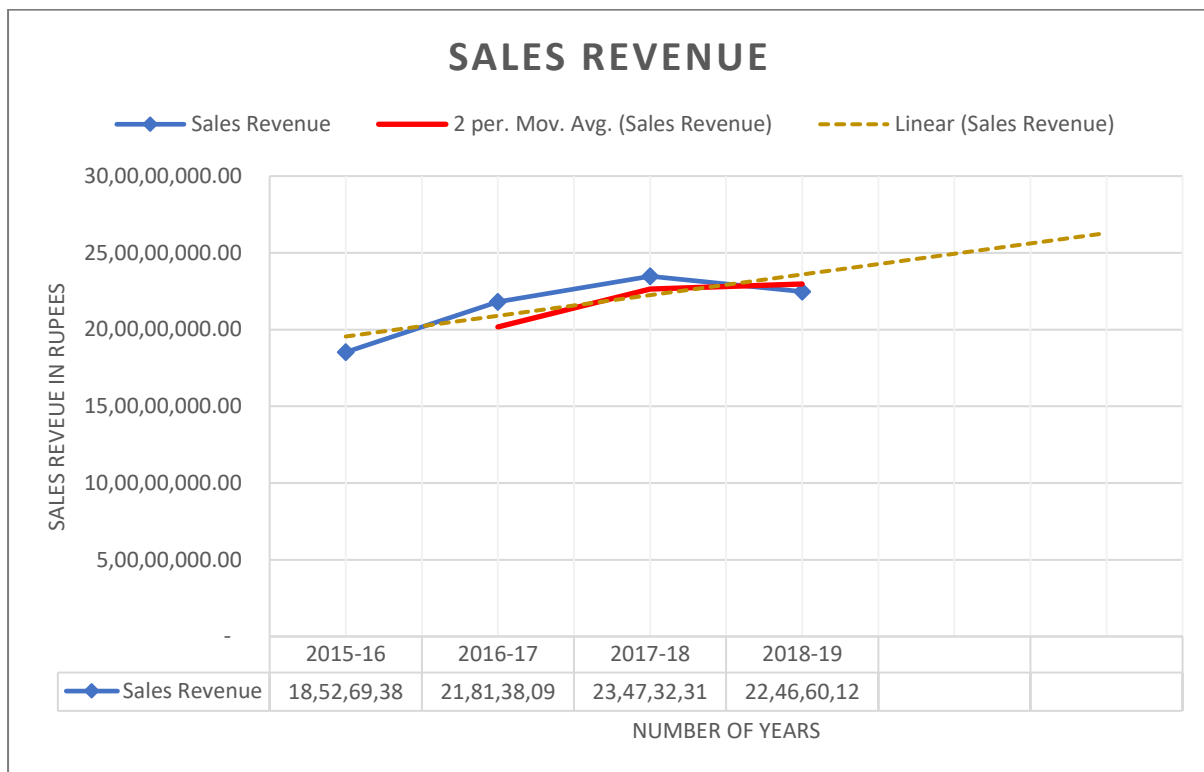

Fig 16: Moving Average Calculation ¹⁹

Years	Sales Revenue in Rupees	Sum of Sales Revenue in Rupees	2 Year Moving Average in Rupees
2015-16	18,52,69,380.32
2016-17	21,81,38,097.62	40,34,07,477.94	20,17,03,738.97
2017-18	23,47,32,314.17	45,28,70,411.79	22,64,35,205.90
2018-19	22,46,60,122.00	45,93,92,436.17	22,96,96,218.09

¹⁸ Appendix 4: Financial Information

¹⁹ Appendix 4: Financial Information

Fig 17: Sales Forecast²⁰

Forecasting sales helps other functions of ESSEMM such as:

- Preparing overall cash flow forecasts, production schedules, stock management and whether the human resource department should lay off or recruit more employees.
- Managers can understand market trends and identify the reasons for it. It also enables identification of opportunities and threats in advance to reduce uncertainties so that allocation of various budgets for different functions i.e. R&D for a new product which ESSEMM innovates every year.²¹

The dotted line/line of best fit, shows extrapolation. Its role is to show if the sales patters are stable in the near future. As shown, there is a direct increase in the upcoming years. However, the key assumption that what happened in the past is likely to continue in the future is unrealistic, so results may lack accuracy. It also ignores qualitative factors such as employee motivation, changes in market demand in the real business world and competitors such as ABC Agro and Food (Fig 4). Moreover, as ESSEMM has a broad range of products the predictions may lose accuracy. The decrease in sales can be attributed to the lack of marketing activities and problems with the marketing mix. It can also be said that ESSEMM

²⁰ Appendix 4: Financial Information

²¹ Appendix 1: Interview with Vice President is predicted to be in a good financial position. However, these predictions may not be sufficient if the sales dip in the following years due to poor performance (Hoang 119).

Conclusion and Recommendations

From the research, taking into account the quantitative and qualitative analysis ESSEMM can implement many strategies in order to fulfil their customer satisfaction. The tools have helped me to understand the company's issue in depth in order to form a solution. Currently, ESSEMM is in a good position financially and among its existing customers. However, the decline in sales can be attributed to the inefficiencies in distribution and a lack of brand awareness in the whole Indian market as they have plans to expand into other major metropolitan cities as a market development growth strategy. The company can sustain itself in the short term i.e. 3 years with the current financial sales forecast, however if customers are not happy with the service of delivery, there are chances that they may switch to competitors. Hence, in order to remain competitive ESSEMM have to focus primarily on expanding in such a way that their brand is publicly acknowledged and praised. In order to rectify their issue ESSEMM has to adhere to modern day e-commerce technology and use intermediaries so that they can efficiently distribute their products.

The following recommendations were formulated in order for ESSEMM to secure success in the upcoming years:

- The development of an IOS/Android application which allows customers to look at, order and track the delivery of ESSEMM's products. This allows the customer to have complete information about their shipment, hence feel incomplete control of the transaction which ensures customer loyalty to the brand.
- As mentioned, ESSEMM should revamp their distribution channel to contain intermediaries such as a superstore retailer or an agent in order to make distributions of products more efficient. This will ensure that the product will be delivered on time, to the right place, to the right customer and without transit damages. They can also invest in better packaging and cargo trucks in order for comfortable distribution.
- Instead of innovating new products each year, products which have not been pushed into the market such as Stars and Question Marks can be promoted through cost effective advertising methods preferable on social media. This will create more cash cows, bringing in more potential sales revenue and in turn profits.

Furthermore, my research would have garnered more accuracy with the presence of more financial data for each product or the PLC for each product. Having a larger sample size i.e. customers would have helped in gathering more accurate consensus to questions as bias may have been present.

Questions	Answers
1. Would you please give a brief description of your business?	Our business is called ESSEMM, we manufacture and supply kitchen appliances. We supply our appliances under the brand “Cosmos”.
2. Who are your customers?	We sell to people and businesses alike, mostly our customers are restaurants, hotels, hostels, hospitals and canteens. The customers who need to produce food in bulk. We sell to customers in India and others countries as well due to large orders.
3. Currently, what is the issue faced by the company from a marketing stand point?	We have a good relationship with our customers, which is why we have been in business for this long. Currently, since we have a lot of customers distributed over a large area and these customers want large orders, we are finding it difficult to distribute our products with efficiency.
4. How do you plan to tackle this problem?	You have to ask our Marketing department for the specifics but currently we are planning to expand so that we can reach our customers easier. We are planning to set up various headquarters to that regional distribution is better. We want to spread as much awareness as possible so that more customers buy our product. We also innovate new products every year to stay competitive and give better suited/custom kitchen appliances.

Appendix 2: Interview with Marketing Manager

Questions	Answers
1. Can you give an in-depth view of the marketing issue faced by the company?	The company has always performed well. People love our products and come for repeated purchases. However, recently our sales and profits have reduced due to the high costs of distribution. Since we have a large customer base spread out over a vast area, it is hard to reach all of them efficiently. We believe in close customer relationship which is why we have done the distribution ourselves. But it is getting increasing difficult due the large orders placed. We can't reach all of them on time with the limited amount of resources we have. These problems include delays on orders or sometimes even damages. Our costs have increase as we have to look after these problems on our own.
2. How do you plan to tackle this problem?	We are looking at many ways to rectify this issue. Firstly, we plan to expand and set up factories in other places as we are in a niche market currently. So that products reach customers on time without any damages. These places we want to reach are metropolitan cities in India such as Bangalore (where we have already set up), Hyderabad, Chennai, Mumbai and Cochin. We also want to better our brand image through more advertising. We want to reach as many people as possible along with the expansion. We are also looking at new distribution channels but we do not want to lose the relationship we have with our customers. We would also like to get involved in online selling. Now we just have our company website.

3. Currently what are your marketing strategies? Price, Product, Place and Promotion?	Pricing we have always stuck to cost plus pricing as it is simple and customer are willing to pay that price but some of our competitors try to undercut our prices with cheap products. However, customers usually don't buy from these people. Our company is known for quality. We have the certification of SS304 and SS316 high-quality stainless-steel. We give warranties and try to package the products in wooden crates to avoid plastic use. Our after sales is the best across any company because if any defects are found we also have 24/7 customer support. As said for distribution we currently have no intermediaries but we might change this soon. We advertise on TV (Vijay TV channel), the newspaper and websites like India Mart and Trade India. Sometimes we also display our products in exhibitions.

4. Which are your top products?	A lot of our customers buy Vegetable Cutters, Cokwoks, Zets A8, Universal Food Processing Machines and Juice Dispensers. Our top customers are all restaurants that's why they but this. We make the most revenue from this as well.
5. Which are products that are not doing well in the market?	I think they are the Combi Steamer and the Chapati Machine. No one buys these machines anymore. We are also planning on discontinuing them.
6. Which products have you newly introduced?	We launched the Cookwok Prime this year as Cookwok did really well. We also have Steam Pro and the Multi Utility Grinder. These have done really well since launch. We also launched the vegetable cutter but it has been more successful.
7. What products do you plan to promote?	As more people are demanding modernized food, we are planning to promote the BBQ Machine, Rice Washer and Potato Peeler. We will make these available to all customers buying it such as normal people and businesses as well.

Appendix 5: SWOT Analysis:

Is a management tool to assess where a business is at the present time and how it is affected by the external business environment. In this case, this tool can be used to analyse how ESSEMM's situation is as a business by examining their strengths, weaknesses, opportunities and threats. This can help to pin point and rectify issues.

Fig 11: SWOT Analysis

Strengths	Weaknesses
• High Market Share • Good Brand Image • Customer Loyalty; Retained Customers. • Best Quality Products • Good After Sales Service • Innovative new products made every year. • Affordable Price	• Still a niche market • Low global awareness • Decreasing Profits • Increasing costs • Less outlets; limited reach • Improper distribution channel • High costs of imports and exports.
Opportunities	Threats
• Use of apps for ordering and tracking shipment. • Use of e-commerce for advertising across social media. • India's rising demand for smart kitchen appliances.	• High transportation costs. • Embargo, Tariffs and Quotas. • High competition from major brands and in the international market. • Competitors who sell less quality products for a much cheaper price.

As seen from the SWOT Analysis, it can be said that ESSEMM possesses a very rigid set of strengths such that they are performing well in their market and favoured among their customers. However, their limitations halt them from grasping a wider reach and expanding their market share. This can be improved by altering their operations to fit the increasing use of e-commerce in order to be more competitive. The development of an app to track shipment on orders and view kitchen equipment specifications will make it easier for customers to purchase and ESSEMM to gain a wider customer base. This app can also be advertised on social media platforms. On the other hand, expansions may lead to increased competition and legal restrictions of exporting. The company is also facing a problem of competitors undercutting prices by selling cheaper products. One-way ESSEMM can rectify this issue is through increased marketing activities to raise brand awareness and display their stainless-steel quality.
