Testing:

A/B Testing: This involves creating two different versions of an ad (A and B) with one variable changed (such as the ad copy or the call-to-action). Then running the two ads simultaneously to see which version performs better i.e. knowing if the ad with celebrity endorsement actually do better than a normal ad?

Landing Page Testing: Creating multiple landing pages with different layouts, headlines, and content. Users are directed to each landing page from different ads, and the performance of each landing page is measured to see which one converts better. Are the landing pages aesthetic, user interactive and leading toward conversions and purchases?

Ad Copy Testing: Testing different variations of ad copy to see which one resonates best with users. This can include testing different headlines, descriptions, and call-to-actions. How effective can copywriting and pictures be in order to convince users to come to my website and make a purchase?

Keyword Testing: Testing different sets of keywords to see which ones perform best in terms of impressions, clicks, and conversions. Whether to use board, phrase or exact matches?

Device Testing: Testing ads on different devices (desktop, mobile, tablet) to see how they perform across different platforms.

Ad Extension Testing: Testing different ad extensions (such as site links or call extensions) to see which ones improve ad performance and user engagement.
