Broad, Phrase or Exact?

Broad keywords will not be used as brand awareness is not Nespresso’s objective running Google Ads - Ideally Nespresso would want Maximum Conversions from e Target ROAS i.e maximizing purchases of products and revenue earned on their website.

Phrase match keywords would show ads for search queries that include the keyword in the exact order, but may also include other words before or after the phrase. This would provide a balance between reach and relevance, targeting people who are specifically looking for Nespresso products, but also showing ads for similar searches i.e. other products sold.

Phrase Keyword Examples:

- “Nespresso coffee pods”
- “Nespresso machines”
- “Nespresso capsules”
- “Nespresso pods for sale”
- “Nespresso compatible pods”
- “Nespresso accessories”
- “Nespresso deals”
- “Nespresso store locations”
- “Nespresso flavors”
- “Nespresso customer service”

Exact match keywords would only show ads for search queries that exactly match the keyword, without any additional words before or after. This would provide the most targeted and relevant ads, but may also limit the reach and potential clicks.

Exact Keyword Examples:

- [Nespresso]
- [Nespresso pods]
- [Nespresso machines]
- [Nespresso capsules]
- [Nespresso accessories]
- [Nespresso deals]
- [Nespresso store]
- [Nespresso flavors]
- [Nespresso customer service]
- [Nespresso Kiosk]

Adding on, Nespresso is a global brand offering coffee machines and services to many locations. Relating to customer search queries geographical location can also be set depending on campaign requirements to redirect customers to purchase, visit stores/kiosks near them in-person, place online orders and access customer service.
